*We ache for the arms of a loved one.
Of a time too short lived.
And of questions left that are more piercing than a knife.
The questions come hauntingly,
pressing on our minds when a loved one takes their life.
Angry and confused, we struggle for breath.
There are good days and bad days-some come without warning.
We remember their names.
We remember their hearts.
Together, we gather strength.
Please bring a photo or a memento of your loved one.*
